

The captive Indian seems to have been a female, and, from some cause now unknown, had incurred the vengeance of the English. Everything regarding the matter, saving the fact of the horrible execution of the prisoner, remains without a shadow of explanation. There was an order given for her execution, but by whom, as we have said, there is no record. The endorsement on the letter is in these words: The captive was “ordered to be torn in pieces by the dogs, and she was dealt withal”!
